CLASS HISTORY

In September, 1953, we the class of 57, made our first appearance in high school. This was one of the most outstanding features of our life.

After the excitement of being high school students subsided, we began to get into the swing of high school work. We had as our freshman teacher, Mrs. Elizabeth Carter. We numbered forty-eight green freshmen. As our freshman officers, we elected; Danny Puckett, President; Ralph Stephens, Vice-President; Peggy McFalls, Secretary; Joe Lowdermilk, Treasurer. This year was highlighted by our initiation.

Before we knew it, the year was completed and we were sparkling sophomores. Our officers were: George Clark, President; Peggy McFalls, Vice-President; Ellen Benfield, Secretary; and Joe Lowdermilk, Treasurer. Our homeroom teacher again was Mrs. Elizabeth Carter.

When we returned as Juniors in the fall of 55, we had much excitement: there were rings to order, magazines to sell, a play to be given, and that all important occasion--the Junior-Senior banquet at which we were host. Our banquet took us to gay Paris. This year we had as our advisor, Mrs. Louise Rodgers and as class officers, we chose Virginia Franklin, President; George Clark, Vice-President; Ellen Benfield, Secretary; and Joe Lowdermilk, Treasurer.

Finally, our senior year was at hand. Thirty-two students of the beginning forty-eight freshmen enrolled as Seniors. Mrs. Mary Reep was our advisor with Peggy McFalls, President; Johnny Kayga, Vice-President; Ellen Benfield, Secretary; and Joe Lowdermilk, Treasurer. The class finally received that long-awaited for class ring. Our senior play "Grandpa's Twin Sister" was a big success and our most exciting event was the trip to Florida. This was an experience never to be forgotten.

Graduation arrived before we knew it and we received our diplomas. Thus our history as a class ends, but each of us will continue to formulate "history" as we take up our every-day tasks.

CLASS PROPHECY

Many years have passed since I had left dear old Oak Hill to make my home in Hawaii. So--I finally decided to make a trip back to visit my Alma Mater.

Before I left I asked Jettie Benfield, who is modeling grass skirts in Hawaii for Alfred Hitchcock, if she and her husband wanted to come along on the trip. She agreed and finally we were on our way, and, oh, my! Just who was that dangerous pilot of our plane? None other than Richard Harrison! After many a frightful incident, even though we were cheered by Elaine Gragg, the hostess, we arrived in California safely. Who was the first person we saw--Joe Lowdermilk driving a solid gold Cadillac with Marilyn Monroe seated by his side.

We hailed a taxi driven by Nanette Cobb to take us around the town, and from her we learned that Joe was not Marilyn's chauffeur, but her fifth husband.

While cruising along toward Las Vegas we were passed by Larry Carpenter's zooming along breaking the speed of sound in a hotrod. When we arrived in Las Vegas we were introduced to the owner of the biggest Casino there--the owner was none other than George Clark. Jean Whisnant and Vernie Whisnant were the bouncers in the Casino while Ellen Benfield, Nell Clontz, and Peggy Caraway were dancing to the music of Virginia Franklin's Jug Band.

After an enjoyable time at the Casino we boarded a plane to Del Rio, Texas to visit a rodeo, starring Edward "Champ" Robinson, the famous bronc buster. There we met 'Texas' Ralph Stephens who had just stolen the name "King of the Cowboys" from Roy Rogers. The foreman of his Magnolia Ranch was the pretty cowgirl, Peggy Bowman.

From Texas, our next stop was New Orleans where the Mardi Gras was in full swing. We learned that Patsy Cobb had just been crowned Queen. When time for the unmasking came, we spotted Juanita Copeland, Ruby Laughridge, Floydene Sellars taking time off from their house work to join in the fun. From this chat with our old schoolmates we learned that Charlotte Franklin and her husband were on a Safari in darkest Africa. From them we also learned that Eudine Ollis was superintendent of the nurses at John Hopkins Hospital. From Louisiana we decided to take a boat to Florida where so long ago we had journeyed on our Senior trip. There we met Donald Carswell, now Commander in the Navy. We were saddened to find out that Jim Winters, Ben Saulmon, Danny Puckett, and Claude Ollis were under his stern command. These boys told us that David McGalliard was teaching agriculture in Russia.

From Florida we next stopped in South Carolina where we saw Raymond Hildebran bulldozing the site for the first fully atomic home in the United States for Peggy McFalls (now Mrs. Billy Galloway).

Finally we arrived in Burke County. Our trip to visit our old school mates in North Carolina turned out to be a sightseeing tour because the only schoolmate left in Burke County was Mildred Conley, and efficient secretary for a distinguished law firm. We hired a private plane to take us back to Hawaii where I will resume my work as a mineralogist for the United Nations.
